So you think you're having a really bad day?

This past Friday started out being a good day. Saturday's paper was laid out and ready to go before lunchtime. I had worked hard on it (if I say so myself) and made some nice graphics. It looked good and I thought I could enjoy a quiet afternoon.

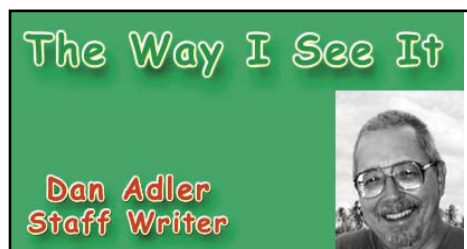

Stupid me.

When I came back from lunch, Nell, the editor, informed me that we had to pull some of the articles that were laid out and had to make completely new ones for various reasons.

To say I was not a happy camper would be a little bit of an understatement.

Why is it whenever I'm in a really big bind and hurrying to get something done, my computer seems to know it and says Ha! See how slow I can go.

It always seems when I'm in that situation, a new software problem I've never encountered before stops in to say hi.

So my really nice afternoon turned into a really bad afternoon.

I was grumbling, making up new words as I went along and threatening my computer with horrible things.

I went outside to cool off but just got even more agitated because I was having this messed up day.

I came back in the office, sat down at my computer, made up even more new words and felt very sorry for myself because I was having this rotten, stinking @$$ day.

Then Nell came to my desk and said the weekly casualty list was ready.

There were 28 names on that list. That's 28 families who lost fathers, sons, daughters and wives.

I stopped and thought about it for a few minutes.

There are more than 1,700 families who have lost someone in Iraq.

There are more than 12,000 families who are struggling to deal with severely disabled loved ones who were wounded in Iraq.

Those folks are really not having good days.

I guess sometimes it takes a little perspective to see clearly.

Maybe my day wasn't so bad after all.

Buckminster and Friends — Sabrina Mumma

CHAPTER 236: BUCKMINSTER ANSWERS YOUR EMAIL INQUIRIES (PART 1)

Dear Buckminster, June 16, 2005
 As usual, I rode the (old) 6:40 bus to work this morning & with the rain when I stepped inside, the water on the floor was cresting waves! All of the seats were soaked. Most of the windows, having been held shut by duct tape, were now "open-air" due to "gummy failure". The rain was entering via the open door and windows & I was sitting in my seat with rain pellets smacking my face to the point of being painful. I finally opened my umbrella ON THE BUS for cover! Should I call the "Hot Line" like the people at 1010 do if they don't have A/C on their bus? I must admit it beat walking to work (the bus was running today) but is there ANYTHING that can be done?

Soggy

DEAR SOGGY, ~ YOU BET! WE'RE SENDING YOU YOUR VERY OWN "KWAJ-BUS SURVIVAL KIT"! IT CONTAINS EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KEEP FROM DROWNING ON THE BUS! UMBRELLA! SPONGE! SNORKEL! AND YOUR VERY OWN....

OH, AND DUCT TAPE! DON'T RIDE WITHOUT IT!

Host Nation chief switches jobs

By Nell M. Drumheller
Editor

Maj. Jeff Klein arrived on Kwajalein May 12, just in time to experience the Marshallese Trade Fair.

It was a fitting time for the Army officer to report to his new duty station. Klein replaces Maj. David Coffey as the chief, Host Nation Office and the Marshallese Trade Fair is one of the many events hosted by that office on Kwajalein.

Klein was transferred from Fort Lewis, Wash. where he spent five years, including a tour as a United Nations Military Observer to Ethiopia and three years as the deputy staff officer for the Civil-Military Operations. According to Klein, he and Coffey are essentially switching jobs, since Coffey will be reporting in at Fort Lewis later this summer.

According to Klein the most important responsibility of the Directorate of Host Nation Activities is embodied in their mission statement. He said it is the responsibility of the HNO to "conduct relationship-building activities with the people and major institutions of the Marshall Islands in order to sustain a stable and cooperative environment."

Klein's been well prepared for this assignment. "As an Army Foreign Area Officer, I went through a vigorous training program to include one year of language training, a one year internship at the U.S. Embassy in Singapore, and two years at UC Berkeley getting a masters degree in Asian Studies-- all before I even had my first job," he said.

"I've worked for the United Nations in Africa and spent the past three years in the office responsible for civil-military relations at Fort Lewis. During that period, I worked with NGOs, Foreign Militaries, the Department of State, and host nation governments in Japan, Thailand, Taiwan and the Philippines. I also have a background in Security Assistance that includes humanitarian assistance projects [referred to as Title 10 projects]," he said.

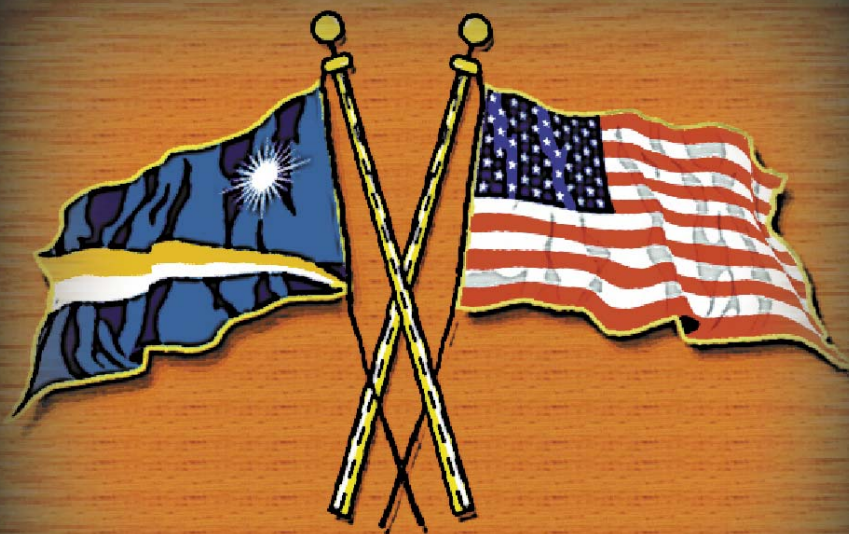

He added that this is a unique job for an Army FAO.

There are aspects to it that are not written in any regular duty description, regulation, or field manual. "I am sure I will have problems. It does not concern me that much because I have some great co-workers and a supporting community," Klein said.

"Ensuring a positive host nation relations is a team effort. We, as a community, will succeed or fail together," he said.

He added, "First, we need to build Marshallese stakeholders in USAKA as a long-term goal. We are in the process of developing plans to bring some Marshallese businesses onto Kwaj for the benefit of Kwaj residents. You can already see black pearls, bottled water and coconut products in our retail establishments. Second, and the community already does a fantastic job of this, continue to engage in community connector activities like Manit Day celebrations, scholarships, and Christmas Drops to name a few. Third, the DHNA will pursue support from other third-party interests like the Department of

The USAKA Host Nation office promotes cooperation between the United States and the Republic of the Marshall Islands.

State and the U.S. Pacific Command in order to conduct humanitarian assistance activities like building community halls on the outer islands, inoculating Marshallese kids, etc.-- things that will directly impact the lives of Marshallese. Finally, we must ensure we effectively communicate the value of USAKA/RTS to the Marshall Islands. Everyone is a spokesman and should know that the presence of USAKA ensures almost 40 million dollars a year to the RMI government (through land use payments, taxes, and other economic incentives), and that it is the second largest employer in the country."

Klein said that he expects to stay on Kwajalein for at least two to four years depending on the Army's needs. "I hope to stay on for the longer number, though," he said. "Kwajalein is a fantastic place. At first I was scared of the size-- it is really small. But, I see now that the fear was unfounded. There are lots of activities, great weather, and friendly people who prevent you from pondering the aspects of size."

His family will arrive in Kwajalein at the end of July.

Kwaj homes filled with twins, triplets, love

What are the chances of bringing more than one “bundle of joy” into this world on the same day? According to the National Vital Statistics Report the odds of having fraternal twins is about one in every 100, however, the odds of having identical twins is about one in 285. Triplets on the other hand are one in 8,100. For such a small community Kwajalein has its fair share of multiples.

Mark and Masina McCollum, Kwaj residents, welcomed three little ones into the world March 14. Makoe, Matai and Maliana were born in Jacksonville, Fla.

Mark and Masina were surprised to hear of their multiple pregnancy even though Mark has a set of twins in the family and Masina has three sets of twins and one set of triplets in her family. “We were pretty shocked when we found out we were having three,” Masina said.

According to Masina it is common for multiple births to be delivered early. “We went in for an ultrasound and the doctor came in and said ‘do you have your car seats with you?’ and told us the babies would be born within the hour," Masina said.

"We did not have our camera, the hospital bag or anything with us," Mark said.

Masina said her advice to anyone who expecting multiples would be to always be prepared for every appointment; you never know when they are going to come.

When asked about what the hardest part of having three babies is Mark said, "When they all cry at the same time, it is a lot of hands-on time."

"It is just so cool to watch them," Masina said, "This month they have learned to smile and laugh," Mark added.

Masina, a Kwaj baby herself, is happy that she can raise her children here.

Jennifer and Daryl Satko, new Kwaj residents, brought their 11-month-old twins with them, Ethan and Mason who were born July 14 in Monterey, Calif.

Both Jennifer and Daryl's mothers are twins.

"When we went in for our first ultrasound the doctor said I see two heads," Jennifer said.

"Are you sure?" was our response," Daryl said.

"We love to watch them play together, it is like they have their own language that no one else understands," Daryl said. "They like to tag-team the cat," he added.

Jennifer said they try to feed the boys at the same time so they can play together when they are awake, but it doesn't always work out that way.

Jennifer explained that when you start raising twins in the states then come over here, you don't have as many options. There are several name brands that are not carried out here. "We order a lot of stuff on-line and in bulk," she said.

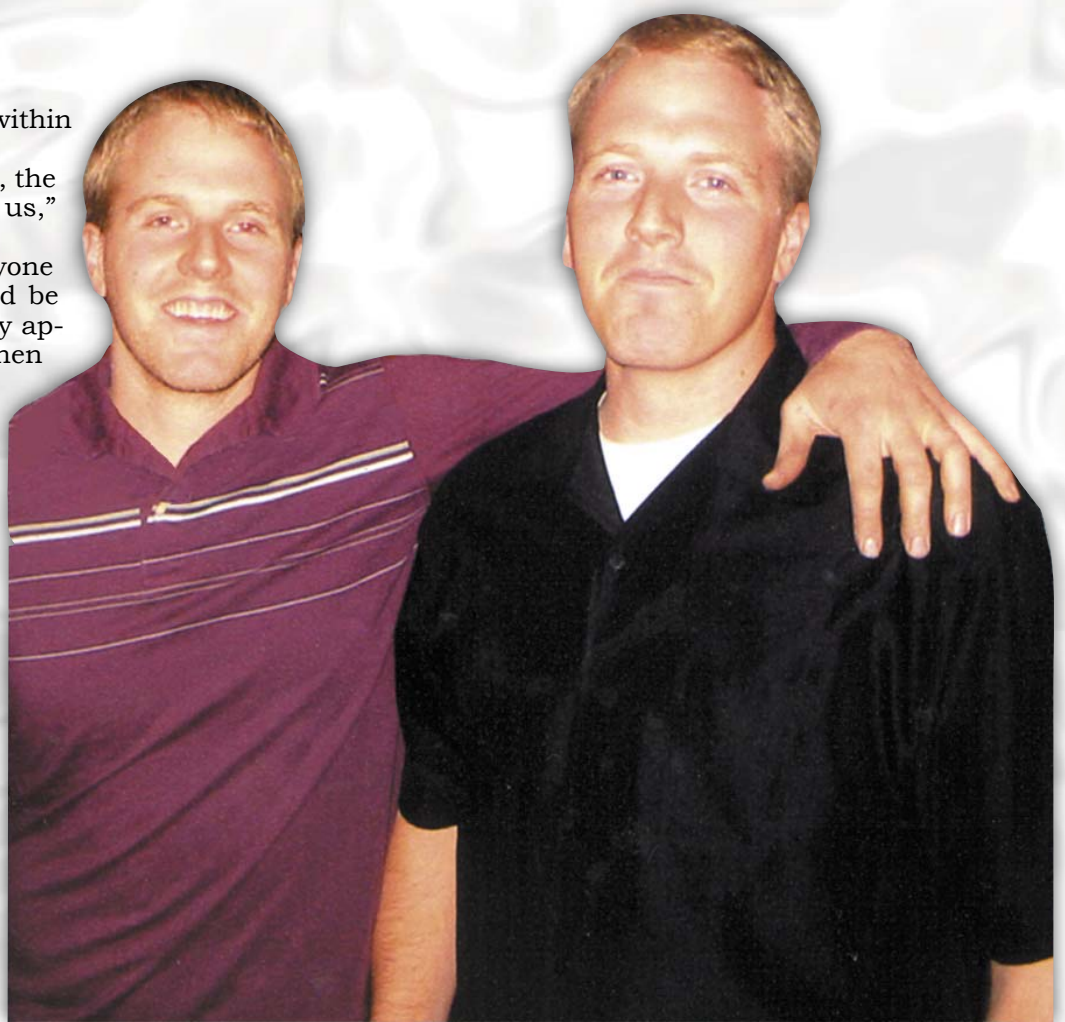

All though it is going to be hard not having family around, the Satkos agree that Kwaj will provide stability for the family and a nice crime-free environment for the twins.

Not only does Kwaj have a few little tikes who were born minutes apart but also some adult twins.

Christian Rusby, Kwaj resident, has an identical twin, his brother Jake is five minutes older than him.

"When I was in high school Jake had a different class schedule than mine and if I needed to go some where I would tell the teacher I had to go to the bathroom and I would leave and he would go back in my place. We would make sure we were wearing the same thing. One time in typing class the girl that I sat next to kept looking at him, she knew something was up," Rusby said.

"The other fun thing we do is when people ask us if we are twins when they see us together and with a straight face Jake says, 'No, I'm his dad.' You wouldn't believe how long people stare, looking back and forth until they realize that it is a joke," Rusby added.

Rusby said "Being a twin is the best. You always have someone to play with."

Ronald Hall also has an identical twin named Donald, both are Kwaj residents. The two are seven minutes apart. Ronald said the best thing about being a twin is, I never in my life have been with out a friend.

"No matter where each of us may be, a part of the other is always present," Ronald said.

When asked what the best thing about being a twin is Donald said, "being born with your best friend. I can't imagine another way of existing." However, Donald says one of the drawbacks is, "having another person that knows intimately every button that's capable of being pushed that you have."

"Don and I both served in the U.S. Navy and each visited several of the same ports. I always found it cool when someone on the other side of the world, in a place that I had never been greeted me as a friend thinking I was my brother. The one exception was in France when a woman I had never met slapped me for not speaking to her. She left in a huff before I could explain that I was not Don," Ronald remembered.

When asked if he had any advice for twins or for people expecting multiple births he replied, "Twins don't need my advice, they tend to view the world through a single set of eyes and draw their own conclusions. For parents of twins, I think it is vital to set aside time with each twin as an individual, apart from the other, to develop their interpersonal skills outside the support of the other."

Drinking alcohol on Kwajalein, Roi permitted in certain areas

By Elizabeth Davie
Reporter

Humphrey Bogart once said, "The whole world is about three drinks behind." If you believe this, where do you go to catch up?

According to U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll/Kwajalein Missile Range regulation 210-21 there are several areas on Kwajalein and Roi-Namur where the consumption of alcoholic beverages is permitted.

According to Lt. Michael Bucher, Kwajalein Police Department operations officer, the penalties for violating USAKA's alcohol consumption policies depend largely on the individual incident. At a minimum, each infraction will result in the issuance of a USAKA/KPD Violation Notice and/or the initiation of a police report/investigation. The police department will forward the resulting paperwork and information to the USAKA command for adjudication; punishments can range from a verbal counseling to removal/barring from USAKA.

"Additionally, the command will convene a Juvenile Review Board if a minor is involved in an alcohol related incident; this board will review the incident and forward their recommendations to the USAKA commander for final determination of punishment," Bucher added.

"In short, the command takes a keen interest in any incident involving alcohol, and the punishments for infractions are wide ranging and far reaching; possibly affecting the individuals' employment on USAKA," Bucher concluded.

IT plans roll out of new computers

By Heather Eisele
Information Technology

By the end of June, Kwajalein Range Services Information Technology Department representatives will begin rolling out a shipment of new personal computers for users with USAKA.

"IT [Information Technology] is currently replacing all older PCs [personal computers] that with new Dell computers. As a matter of practice, when IT finds an older PC that is causing difficulties for users, or we know that it isn't receiving IAVA patches, etc, we're just replacing the PC rather than spend time repairing it since we are just going to be replacing it anyway in the near future," Steve Snyder, IT Technology Support manager said.

"We've received a large shipment of PCs on the last barge, and starting toward the end of June, we'll be on an aggressive schedule to replace all of the older PCs by mid-September. So the bottom line is that anyone with an older PC on the business network is automatically on the list to receive a new Dell. We will also continue to replace any PCs that are problematic to either us or the user; our workload and resources permitting of course."

According to Snyder older computers are defined as any that are slower than a Pentium 4 central processing unit. He added, "All Pentium, Pentium II and Pentium III PCs on the business network will be replaced by the mid-September, throughout the entire atoll. If you have anything that isn't a Compaq Evo or a Dell already, odds are your computer will be replaced."

Snyder said that managers will be contacted a couple of weeks before IT technicians come to replace the PC's in each area. "We'll be going through your buildings to do a quick scan of what you have currently," he said.

Snyder recommends that users "Back up all your data on network drives, including anything on zip disks. We will not be deploying computers equipped with zip drives or compact disc burners unless you have a real business need, already have the equipment and you must indicate that these conditions exist when we do our walk-through two weeks in advance. Remember, anything that is not a part of the standard build and is not identified during that initial walk-through will be lost."

Underage passengers traveling to Ebeye must have parent's approval or travel with an adult

By Nell M. Drumheller
Editor

Family members under 21 who travel to Ebeye on Kwajalein Range Service vessels must be accompanied by a parent or may travel with another adult with a parental letter of permission.

According the Lt. Col. Mark Harmon, U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll provost marshal, passengers are checked at the Dock Security Checkpoint and if they are not with a parent, or they don't have a signed letter from the parent giving approval for the minor to go to Ebeye with another adult, 21 or older, they will not be allowed to go to Ebeye.

Violations of the regulation may result in administrative disciplinary action by the command.

"Health and safety risks that exist at Ebeye are outside the control of the command," Dennis O'Connell, USAKA legal officer said.

"Standards of behavior that are enforced on Kwajalein for the safety and protection of young people cannot be guaranteed on Ebeye. Since the command provides transportation to Ebeye it must assure that persons under 21 are accompanied by a parent or that a parent has given permission to travel with another adult," O'Connell added.
